THE CHARTER OF THE ATLANTIC TELEGRAPH COMPANY.

[From the Boston Traveler.] The act of incorporation of this Company, obtained at the second session of the English Parliament for the year 1857, and receiving the royal assent July 27 of that year, is a document of 21 pages. It is entitled "An act to incorporate and regulate the Atlantic Telegraph Company, and to enable the Company to establish and work telegraphs between Great Britain, Ireland and Newfoundland; and for other purposes." It begins by setting forth that in Ocober, 1856, a company was established in England to connect Great Britain or Ireland with Newfoundland by a submarine electric telegraph—thus establishing electric communicaion between Europe and America-having a capital of £300,000, divided into three hundred shares of £1,000 each. The number of shares was afterward increased to three hundred and fifty, all of which were issued, and the sum of £600 was paid upon each share. It also set forth that in consequence of agreements entered into with other companies and persons, and in order that the undertaking, which is one of great public and national importance, shall be speedily carried into execution, it is desirable that a new company (including the original shareholders) should be constituted, with the necessary powers to carry out the undertaking; and the Atlantic Telegraph Company was therefore incorporated, with all the rights and privileges, and assuming all the liabilities entered into by the old company. The right was granted to the new company, by a two-thirds vote, to increase the capital stock to £1,000,000, the directors having authority to create additional shares of not more than £1,000 nor less than £20 each. The right was given to borrow onethird of the capital, on bond or mortgage, but one-third of the money received for calls must be applied to the repayment of such money until the whole shall be discharged.

Ten shareholders holding stock to the amount of £15,000, have authority to require the directors to call an extraordinary meeting of the Company-the time of the annual meeting being fixed for the month of February, in London; twenty shareholders having stock to the amount of £50,000 constituting a quorum. A two-thirds vote of the Company shall authorize the directors to subdivide the £1.000 shares into fifty shares of £20 each, a £1,000 share confering fifty votes upon the holder. The Board of Directors is fixed at eighteen, but the number may be reduced at any general meeting, but not below eight. The qualification of a Director is the holding of £1,000 in the stock of the Company, and the Directors of the original Company shall be the first Directors of the new Company. The remuneration of the Directors is to be fixed by the stockholders. The Company has authority to elect from the stockholders ordinarily resident in the United States or the British Provinces of North America, not more than eight from the former and four from the latter, who shall be Honorary Directors, shall have the right to be present, take part in and vote at the meeting of the Directors, but are not to be counted in determining whether there is a quorum, and shall receive no remuneration

The British Government reserves the right to appoint an ex officio Director of the Company, for the purpose of securing the due fulfillment on the part of the Company of all contracts for the transmission of signals and messages for her | naked, he applied to the Treasurer for money. Majesty, or on her Majesty's service. This ex office Director is not to go out of office with the other Directors, but he is removable at the pleasure of the Government. He is to be a shareholder in the Company or not, as the Government may think fit; he is to be present at all meetings of the Directors and of the Company, and has power to examine all books and documents of the Company, but has not the right to vote, and does not receive any remuneration from the Company.

He has the power, in the case he is of opinion that any act or course of the company is prejudicial to the performance of the contracts with Government, or the regular, speedy, and impartial transmission of messages for the publie, or otherwise disadvantageous to Government or the public, to veto the taking of such course or the doing of such act when the matter shall be referred to the Lords Commissioners of the Treasury, whose opinion shall be final, unless the Board of Directors see fit to appeal to two Judges of the Superior Court at Westminster, whose decision shall be final and conclusive on all parties. The election of Directors of the Company, ordinary or honorary, is subject to the approval of the Lords Commissioners of the Treasury.

The undertaking of the Company was set forth to be the laying down of one or more submarine telegraph cables between Ireland and Newfoundland, or on the Continent of America, and the working of such lines. They are authorized and empowered to make arrangements with the New York, Newfoundland, and London and other Companies, for the tranmission of messages and for the charges on the same as may be necessary for the carrying out of the object of the Company. They are empowered to fix and receive reasonable charges for the transmission of messages, and may demand pre-payment of the same. With the exception of the priority of Government messages, all others for the public are to be received and sent without favor or preference, a cording to the order of time in which they shall have been received by the Company. The following section, in regard to the right of Government priority, we quote entire: "LVI. All messages and signals sent or forwarded for transmission and delivery for her Majesty or her Majesty's service shall have priority over all other messages whatsoever, and it shall be imperative on the Company, their officers and servants, to transmit and deliver such messages and signals accordingly, and to suspend the transmission of all or any other messages until the said messages and signals shall first have been transmitted : Provided, always, that the Company may, in consideration of a guarantee or subsidy granted or secured by the Government of the United States equal in rate or amount to that granted by or on behalf of her Majesty's Government, grant and extend to the Government of the United States the like priority for intelligence, on and for their service over all other messages and signals whatsoever, except those for her Majesty or on her Majesty's service, and after they shall have so done, and shall have notified their having so done to the Lords Commissioners of her Majesty's Treasury, the messages and sig-nals on the service of the Government of the United States shall thenceforward be entitled to, and shall have, during the continuance in opportunity to take him off his guard. The force of any such guaranty or subside the like father, however, kept him at a distance and priority as messages and signals for her Majesty or on her Majesty's service over those of all other persons whatsoever, and thenceforward messages and signals for her Majesty or on her Majesty's service, and those on the service of the Government of the United States, shall, as between themselves, have no right of priority, but be transmitted and delivered respectively in the order of time in which they may be respectively tendered for transmission and de-

If the Government and the Company cannot agree upon the rate of remuneration for sending public messages, the matter is to be settled by referees.

The Company is authorized whether or not they shall grant to the Government of the United States any such priority as is stated in the section before quoted to make arrangement with that Government for the transmission of their messages. The following section authorizes the English Government, under certain circumstances to take possession of the works of the Company. "LXII. At all times from and after the period of twenty-five years from the opening of the said lines of telegraphic communication for the transmission of messages, whenever one of her Majesty's principal Secretaries of State for the time being shall be of opinion that circumstances render it expedient to vest in her Majesty's Government the control of the operations of the company, it shall be lawful for all, bravely adhare to her."

here, however, he was sorely grieved at the spiritual destitution of the poorer Italians in New York, and urgently requested the Arch-bishop to allow him to become their pastor.

The requisite permission was obtained, and he at once entered upon his charge. Renting the basement of the Catholic Church in Canal street, he soon filled it with the faithful, and became so popular among his countrymen that his congregation overflowed the little church, and filled the courts on each side. It was his great ambition to build a small church for poor Italians. As priests are not usually good financiers, he appointed two members of his congregation (they were brothers living in White street) to be Secretary and Treasurer.

The brothers between them bore the purse.

Each Sabbath and feast day they received contributions toward the new church, as well as donations for the minister, and the rent of the pews. The good Pastor, who had a little money of his own, and a few friends who occasionally helped him, told the officers to add the donations intended for himself to the church fund, saying that as long as he could he would support himself without assistance from his people, if he could thereby further the object he had so much at heart. Thus, for nearly two years, the church went on increasing and prospering. But, at length, the pastor's means failed him. He had lived poorly, on lenten diet, clothed himself as cheaply as possible, and resorted to all sorts of shifts to eke out his funds, in order to avoid encroaching upon the contributions of the congregation. But the end came at last, and, hungry and almost That person told him he could give him none the money, and a friend paid it for him. Father Sanguinetti told the Treasurer and his brother that they must in future pay him the donations received from the congregation, as he had no other means of support. Instead of doing this, however, they tied the money up in a pocket-handkerchief every Sunday and carried it away

The Priest was thus reduced to great distress, often suffering for the necessaries of life. This state of things becoming known to the Irish portion of his congregation, they contributed enough to relieve his necessities. The Irish element having largely increased in the congregation, they urged him to rent the church up stairs, which was then vacant. He consented, and although $2,000 a year was asked, succeeded in obtaining it for half that sum. The brothers, when requested to pay the quarter's rent in advance, refused to do so, saying that he had no right to incur so much expense, and the money was raised by the pastor among his friends. As the church was sadly dilapidated and in need of repairs, Father Sanguinetti employed workmen to put it in order. This excited the ire of the Secretary and Treasurer, who claimed that it was their province to look after the temporal affairs of the church, and they refused to pay for anything that he might order to be done. He then sought the Archbishop for advice, who told him he had better dismiss the officers and take the funds under his own care. Acting up to this advice he sent for the two brothers, who came to see him in the sacristy on the 10th of July last. He told them that they must give him their books and the funds of the church, which now amounted to between $700 and $800. At this they became very angry, swearing that they and not he were masters there, and both of them fell upon hiw, beating him savagely with their fists, kicking him and breaking a table and some other furniture over his head. Father Sanguinetti says that, next to God, he believes that the timely appearance of his courageous little Irish servant-woman saved his life. She sprang between him and his assailants, and picking up a stool, defied them to touch him again at their peril. Thereupon the cowards contented themselves with crying "Down with the priest!" "To hell with the priest!" and soon after left.

Next day, when he was about to say mass in church, they renewed their attack upon him, coming up to the altar and calling him all sorts of evil things, but they did not do him personal violence. They were finally removed by the police. On the 18th of July an Italian named Louis came to him and threatened to take his life because he had appointed an Irishman an officer of the church. Louis also had to father found the front door of the church unlocked, and it is his impression that his unknown visitor intended to assassinate him, and then escape through the front door. This singular story is substantially as released by Father Sanguinetti, himself, who says that he cannot account for these attempts to do him injury.

He has not yet succeeded in obtaining the church funds from the late officers. The attack that they made upon him was of so severe a character that he was for some time very ill in consequence, and we are told be has sustained injuries from which he will never recover. He

THE FRENCH LANGUAGE.

The facilities afforded at the FEMALE ENG-LISH AND FRENCH COLLEGIATE INSTI-TUTE for a thorough and practical knowledge of the French language, are not surpassed or equalled by any other Institute in the city. The corps of French teachers will be increased the coming year, which will commence on the 6th of September, and more of the studies of the school will be pursued and taught through the medium of the French than heretofore as a large majority of the pupils now speak the language with fluency. The advantages afforded by the Soirces alone will enable any one who has a tolerably good reading knowledge of the language, to speak it fluently in the course of the language, to speak it fluently in the course of the winter.
